The Zecca Mint. The Zecca originally stood near the Rialto Bridge, but was moved to the sestiere of San Marco in 1277 for safety reasons: by facing the sea, there was no risk of sparks flying from the molten metal and thus a fire hazard. In 1536, as part of the restructuring of the Piazzetta, Jacopo Sansovino began to build the Nuova Zecca: the ashlar work also covering the columns gives the entire building a feeling of great strength and a certain air of military defence.
